

The Herald-News

A CHICAGO SUN-TIMES Publication

Tissue donation allows son's memory to live on

The Associated Press December 31, 2012 12:26PM

Tweet 1

0

Share 0

0

Share 1

0

Updated: January 2, 2013 2:34AM

NORMAL — Since John Lefferts died suddenly and unexpectedly of an aortic dissection at age 22, his family has been on a journey.

"I feel like my heart is truly broken," said his mother, Vivian Lefferts of Normal. "After my son died, I thought 'How will I tell people about John? How will I keep his memory alive?'"

Ads by Google

CIA - Intelligence Degree

Earn an intelligence degree online at American Military University.

www.AMU.APUS.edu/Intelligence

In this photo taken Dec. 14, 2012 in Normal, Ill., Larry Lefferts examines odds and ends that belonged to his son, John, on a bookcase in his office. John died suddenly and unexpectedly of an aortic dissection at age 22. More than 37 people have received tissue donations following his death. The Lefferts' believe that by choosing the path of tissue donation they are keeping their son's memory alive by helping others live. (AP photo, The Pantagraph, David Proeber)

A path chosen by Vivian and Larry Lefferts was to keep their son's memory alive by helping others to live. They agreed that their son would be a tissue donor. His two corneas and 35 bones and tissues have improved the lives of 37 people in 14 states.

"It's a way for his legacy to live on," said Eleanor Hess of Normal, John's sister.

The Lefferts became volunteer-advocates with the Gift of Hope Organ & Tissue Donor Network. They have spent much of the past eight years encouraging people to register to be organ and tissue donors.

They are members of the organization's Donor Family Advisory Council and led a letter-writing campaign supporting the bill that created the Illinois Organ/Tissue Donor Registry in 2006.

Their efforts were honored with Vivian's selection to be among 32 riders from throughout the country on the Donate Life Float during the Rose Parade in Pasadena, Calif., on Tuesday.

"The float honors the millions of people touched by organ and tissue donations across the country and the millions of people who are waiting (for a transplant)," said Gift of Hope spokesman Tony Sullivan.

"The Lefferts stand out because of the commitment they have shown to raise public awareness," Sullivan said. While Vivian was on the float, she represented Larry, Eleanor and other family members who watched the parade in Pasadena.

"We can't think of a better representative than Vivian," Sullivan said. "The theme of this year's float is Journeys of the Heart. When John died, the Lefferts started on a journey of the heart and they have been on that journey for more than eight years."

Vivian said, "It's an honor to take John's story to another level."

John was a likeable young man and loyal friend who would lend money to people in need and pick up friends who needed rides in the middle of the night. He was great with kids and liked helping older adults. At the time of his death on Oct. 11, 2004, he was living in Springfield, working in patient transportation at Memorial Medical Center and studying at Midwest Technical Institute to be a massage therapist.

Copyright 2013 Associated Press. All rights reserved. This material may not be published, broadcast, rewritten, or redistributed.

<http://heraldnews.suntimes.com/news/17316970-418/tissue-donation-allows-sons-memory-to-live-on.html>